PAINT-OUTS: Meetings on zoom with David Deyell will be announced when available.

Peter McDonald never set out to be an artist but today his unique style, defined by intricate line work, has been in countless shows and winning many awards. The first art class he took, on a mere whim to relieve stress, launched him on a journey he could not have imagined at the time. He was guided by such mentors as Dr. Alex Vilumsons, the late award-winning abstract impressionist, the master teachers at Art Co-op 7, and iconic watercolorists, Tom Fong and Fealing Lin. "I knew immediately my life was about to change," the abstract artist recalled that first class after coming to the U.S. from England. "I just had no idea how profoundly. It was the same with abstraction. Alex supported me but let me find my own path....Tom gave me the courage to take risks and have fun with art, while Fealing taught me everything I know about watercolor." The Australian-born artist, now an American citizen, is a three-time winner of the PSA's Yoko Cohen Award. His work is in collections in the U.S., England, Australia and Germany. "Peter's talent and professionalism is what makes galleries work," said Bill Knauer, manager of The Cove Gallery in Laguna Beach.

ARTIST STATEMENT:

Watercolor has a reputation as a difficult medium but I believe it is only because people want to control the water. For me each painting is an adventure, a journey of discovery. I rarely start with a subject in mind. As I pour color and play with shapes and texture I uncover themes and ideas. These often change during the process. The final step is always my line work. Watercolor is my love and line is my passion.
